

Professor Jonathan Gutoff is one of the nation's top experts on piracy and maritime law issues. In addition to his popular courses on Administrative Law, Admiralty, Civil Procedure, and Remedies, Gutoff is a former acting director (and present faculty member) of RWU Law's Marine Affairs Institute. His articles have appeared in top legal publications such as the Journal of Maritime Law and Commerce ("The Law of Piracy in Popular Culture"), the Tulane Law Review, and the University of Pittsburgh Law Review. He has addressed regional, national and international conferences on marine and environmental law issues, and he is regularly sought out for his expert commentary by media outlets as diverse as the National Law Journal and National Public Radio.

Professor Gutoff, a classics major at Brown, earned his J.D. at the University of Chicago.
