

Kent Barnett is an Associate Professor at the University of Georgia School of Law, where he teaches administrative law, contracts, and consumer law. Focused on the separation of powers and judicial review in the federal administrative state, his scholarship is published or forthcoming in, among other places, the New York University Law Review, Michigan Law Review, Vanderbilt Law Review, Notre Dame Law Review, Indiana Law Journal, UC Davis Law Review, and North Carolina Law Review. He earlier taught at the University of Kentucky College of Law, clerked for Judge John Rogers of the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Sixth Circuit, and practiced law at Weil, Gotshal & Manges in its complex commercial litigation and appellate groups. He earned his undergraduate degree summa cum laude from Centre College and his law degree summa cum laude from the University of Kentucky College of Law. He currently serves as the reporter for the Administrative Conference of the United States' Model Adjudication Rules Working Group.